

TowerJazz Provides Clarity on Notes Discussions

May 29, 2012

MIGDAL-HAEMEK, Israel, May 29, 2012 /PRNewswire/ --

TowerJazz, the global specialty foundry leader, today clarified reports appearing in the local Israeli press regarding the expected conversion of capital notes into shares of Tower. TowerJazz retained a large third party international financial institution with which it had been engaged over the past several months in a variety of discussions with all of TowerJazz's three holders of capital notes towards scenarios of notes buy back in a model and at a price that the company believed would create value for all its stakeholders and the company. The banks, requested a price which could not be justified by the company and hence an arrangement was not reached to date.

TowerJazz has not been provided with notice by any of its capital note holders that they intend to convert capital notes into shares. Bank Hapoalim and Bank Leumi have asked the company to file a registration statement with the SEC in order to register ordinary shares underlying 40 million and 45 million capital notes, respectively, which would be issued if either or both banks wish to convert said capital notes or a portion thereof into shares. In this regard, the Israel Corporation has informed the company of its intent to convert all of its holding of capital notes into shares, but as a long term strategic shareholder did not ask to register its shares. Israel Corporation has informed TowerJazz that it does not intend to sell or trade its shares at the present time and has expressed its belief in the company's strategy and growth plans.

Description of Notes

- In 2006 and 2008, the banks converted debt into a vehicle of capital notes and as part of this restructuring of bank debt; the Israel Corporation invested new money into the company. In all, the three capital note holders invested $550 million in cash and debt conversion and received 399 million notes (comprised of 206 million being held by Israel Corporation and 96.4 million being held by each of the banks) representing $1.38 per capital note.
- The capital notes are solely an equity vehicle, with each note being convertible into one share.
- Under Israeli banking law, each bank is restricted to hold not more than 5% ordinary shares in a company of which it is a debt holder.

- The registration request received by TowerJazz was pursuant to a customary registration rights agreement entered into when the capital notes were initially issued. There can be no assurance that any registration statement filed pursuant to a request of a capital note holder will be declared effective by the SEC.
